

The foundation of Exopolitics is discovery through contact and sustained inquiry that will result in new innovations. The innovations that result in new technologies, new products, new knowledge, and new processes has its roots in research and follows a path from research idea, through pilot or prototype production, manufacturing start-up, to full-scale production and ultimately market introduction, which has an impact upon economics. The management of discovery, research, and development processes is a key to Exopolitics Research/Development and success.
