

BLUE NIGHT

Wavespell:

Blue Night is the immense field of potential found in the depths of human emotion and feeling. The touch of Blue Night is like the moment you crawl into bed and feel yourself surrounded by warmth, darkness and peace.

Blue Night's abyss holds the potent evolutionary playing field of all possibility. Here, as in the aboriginal dreamtime, there are no distinctions between then and now, real or imagined, dream or dreamer. In this expanded field, all things are not only possible but are constantly in the process of creation. In the framework of dreamtime, limiting constructs of "ordinary reality" such as time, space, and linear causality are freed into an expanded system, with unlimited access to ALL realities.

Blue Night's action – its direction in life – is to dream. We are accustomed to two levels of dreaming, day and night. The daytime is wishfulness and imaginative prayer, a reverie for what might be or a remembering of what was. Nocturnal dreaming has less cognitive order and control, consumes us with karmic unfolding as we sort relationships to other souls and the divine source. We might prefer the childlike wonder of living dreamily through a day than entering the chaotic unfolding of our nocturnes, but Blue Night people show us how to trust the positive freedom of moving past dreams of want, of wishing, and into dreams of pure transformation, clearing and reconciliation. The nighttime dream is the actualization of our daytime yearning, offering all angles of necessary upheaval towards the resolutions we seek. Blue Night people live as though in the Dreamtime, allowing mystery and incongruity, odd happenstance and even shock, terror, to help clear obfuscations against our waking ease and joyfulness. Blue Night people live for the reality of dreaming, for the validity of the ethereal world, for the surrealism of slipping off to sleep and into an eternal life.

Blue Night's power – its offering to strengthen us in turn – is abundance. Blue Night people are embodied and know how to create a vital life on earth. While they are dreamers, they anchor their soul journeys in their hearts, their body cavities. They are able to travel so far because there is a home to return to that's being treated with care and consideration, that it needs rest without running overtime. With this attention to their physical health, they can manifest qualities of abundance – anything from ease of wealth to a warm and peaceful home environment. Early in the Tzolkin's unfolding, Blue Night offers us all the foundation of a sound body, a stable home so that we can launch a life on earth and a cycle through the other archetypes from health. Abundance can sound like money, but it's more efficient to imagine it as what the money brings, omitting our concern for the middleman. The power of abundance is to have what we need to rest and enter the Dreamtime, so in simplest terms it's a roof, walls and a secured door. In our modern living, it's a life with the amenities we individually need to be calm and at ease so that our psychic faculties stay open to sacred messages, our intuition working as a sixth sense to support our further spiritual awakening.

Blue Night has the essence of intuition, the ability to sense resonances that are beyond physical and for the Maya are drafted in their hieroglyphic code as a curved inward horn, the inner ear of listening and attention to what the divine offers as guidance and reassurance. The Blue Night tribe can masterfully see and sense the illusory world, one that is at heart filled with light, just as a film reel is Technicolor projected along a bright beam. They are guides through and guardians of the Dreamtime because they have select receptivity to larger divine influence, and it allows them to also see the continuum between REM sleep and walking through our waking life. Intuition is the access to the world of night dreaming while awake, decoding the symbols and greeting the karmic visitors that pass through.

Blue Night is antipodal, opposite, to Red Skywalker. The opposition always creates balance, and the relationship of Blue Night and Red Skywalker is a perfect example. Red Skywalker is the waking dream, when we are just barely tethered to earth by our root system, as with corn, the Mayan origin for this modern rendition of one who reaches for the sky. We are propelled into the ethers for spirit messages that will act as prophecy and feed the people. Red Skywalker dreams all day, to balance the Blue Night's Dreamtime reverie. Together, they invite an eternal dream state and all its challenges to a stable, linear lifetime. They invoke the surreal experience of accessing other dimensions, lifetimes, archetypal odysseys instead of being focused and fixated on everyday life on earth. Blue Night people can be challenged by Red Skywalker because it pushes them to stay in their expansive state of surrealism longer than usual. Red Skywalker, too, would like a corn stalk take the nighttime to diminish its growth and be still. Reciprocally, Blue Night and Red Skywalker catapult each other into wilder, freer journeying through the dreamscape of our psyche.

Blue Night is analogous, supported by Yellow Warrior. A warrior is always leaving realism when entering the battlefield. There is nothing everyday about techniques for murderous combat. We are in turn like warriors when we face some of the unresolved horror that stirs in our psyche from ancient lifetimes and childhood experiences of wounding. The fearless dreaming we enter at night is supported by our Yellow Warrior nature, our shielded defense system that keeps our vulnerability protected and impenetrable. The ways we have to fight in the world – sometimes on this level of reality and more often on the paranormal one – are supported by our realization of the Dreamtime threaded through our cellular, earthen experience. If we can sense with our intuition the attack forces, the guardians, that occupy the invisible world, we can beat back the adversaries and embrace the angelic agents of support. We can fight with focus, defending the territory of our hearts.

Blue Night has a mystical, occult relationship to White Mirror. Blue Night takes us into a world where there are no walls, borders, limits. We are afloat in an experience where time shifts and shapes shift and we bounce nonsensically through different ages of our lives and of all of existence in order to reweave disharmony in our psyche, in the collective psyche of all of creation. White Mirror, too, takes us out of cogent rational limitation and in recalling the human sacrifice ritual of the ancient Maya, breaks our hearts open in order to give them more wholly to the Universal Sources.
