

DIVINE MIND OF CONSCIOUSNESS

This document is addressing consciousness of both the human mind and the Divine Mind. It will not be discussing this process with regards to densities.

What is The Difference Between Superconscious and Subconscious Mind?

The subconscious mind is a bridge between the superconscious and conscious mind. Another way to look at it is that the conscious controls most of our life but draws from past actions and the habits we have created from them. Hence, ideas arising from the conscious mind are not new.

The subconscious mind is associated with a relaxed and lucid dream state. It contains the knowing of all knowledge, wisdom, and understanding. It allows us to be a multi-dimensional being.

The superconscious state is a highly peaceful and energetic state of being. In that sense, the superconscious mind is a level of awareness where one can see the material reality as well as the energy behind that reality. The superconscious does not turn down energy.

Our human energetic body is like a computer system, governed by the software that is our mind. Our mind is also the key that allows us to connect to the Divine. The software that is running you has been created by your thoughts, your environment, your experiences, your teachers, and society. You have the power to choose to manifest a higher frequency of consciousness, and live and experience and manifest your life from that space. You have the power to think whatever you choose, and make your cognitions or understandings of life powerful or dis-empowering. It is in these moments when life is difficult that we get to delve deeper within and find the key cognitions that drive us, and from that space of true self-realization, choose to activate higher empowering cognition about life and ourselves. You are a powerful being that has the choice to activate yourself at any time, and the secret to activating yourself is understanding you can. Without understanding that you are a powerful being capable of manifesting, you will not be able to embody your true higher self. You Are a powerful being.

So let's get to the understanding part....

Our human consciousness is not a process, but rather behaviors centered around our awareness and resulting perceptions. On many levels, we grapple with the nature of our consciousness, rather than our knowledge of it. Human consciousness emerges on the interface between three components of animal behavior: communication, experiences, and the perception, which forms our belief systems. These three components interact on the basis of anticipatory behavioral control or the awareness of limitations, conflict, fear, and separation. The interaction between communication and experiences yields symbolic ideals of language in pre-formed thought; the interaction between these ideals and perceptions results in human praxis (practices/customs). Taken together, this gives rise to the mechanisms that allows humans, instead of performing controlling actions overtly, to play forward the corresponding behavioral options in a "second reality" of objectively (by means of perception) grounded symbolic belief systems.

Our state of being then becomes a false awareness of limitation, separation, conflict, and external control that has been conditioned into our consciousness. This accounts for our incarnate form being forced to vibrate at frequencies of the denser physicality causing the conflict of separation.

Our Ontic (relating to real as opposed to phenomenal existence) reality is divided into four different planes of existence or dimensions of behavioral complexity that are labeled: 1) Matter-Object; 2) Life-Organism; 3) Mind-Animal; 4) Culture-Person. Our mind must have a developed framework of reference between an object and its position in the world relative to the field of physical information it is in. When framed this way, there are some analogies it makes between the position of an entity, the information it has contact with, and the field it is in. This means our functional awareness and responsivity is defined purely from the exterior belief position. Therefore, the state of matter frequency will always be from a lower, denser frequency.

This is why it is necessary for us to clear any resonance patterns associated with dense frequencies so that we can reach and emanate the frequencies of the infinite higher mind in the Divine. This comes down to our theory of knowledge within the recognized awareness through the process of awakening. It changes the mind from neurocognitive processes associated with functional awareness and response, to self-conscious justification and narration of higher subjective reasoning.

So our awareness equating to conscious perception is broken down into human consciousness in five steps.

1. The first step is referred to as the “base of sentience.” This refers to the emergence of feeling states, such as pleasure or pain. These states broadcast signals of what the animal cares about and mark what is “good” and thus should be approached, and what is “bad” and thus should be avoided.
2. Evolutionary adaptive history, where there was a significant shift and growth of the cortical areas that are associated with planning, mental stimulation, and deliberation. This affords the development of what we might call an “experiencing self” that operates in a “global neuronal workspace.” The experiencing self is divided into adverbial and adjectival aspects. Adverbial is the function to focus, frame, and index with a hereness-nowness-togetherness function, whereas adjectival refers to the properties that are experienced, such as the odor of a predator.
3. The third step is framed as the social-relational step, which expands the experiential self into social relations. Complicated social relations create the need for a self-other matrix and very likely deepen the ways the experiencing self, functions to map the world in relation to others. For example, connecting with others requires complicating ways of representing the interests and mental states of others but also requires ways of differentiating and separating one’s own interests.
4. The fourth step is mental capacities for shared attention and shared intention. This allows us to generate a theory of mind and sync up with others into common “we” spaces. This is seen in things like the way kids understand pointing things out as socially awkward or forming theories of the mental states of others. In other words, passing judgement.
5. The fifth step is propositional language and explicit, self-conscious recursive reflection that comes with reason-giving, arguing, and solving the problem of justification. While implicit intersubjectivity set the combustible stage, propositional language was the spark that set off the human mind’s big bang and launches the emergence of the Culture-Person plane of existence.

So put simply, your frequency as a human being is defined by your level of consciousness, you are how you think. Your thoughts define the frequency of your consciousness, the frequency of your human existence. The higher your energy rises, the higher the frequency of your consciousness rises, the more powerful your manifestation energy becomes, the closer you reach to the Divine Consciousness.

We need to understand the process of Divine Consciousness in the Divine Mind. The Divine Mind of the Universal Source has seven stages of consciousness from the creation in the ethereal realms to the manifestation of matter. This process created the energy matrices of base frequencies consisting of pure Life-Force Energy.

1. First is the manifestation of matter composed wholly of matter in the denser gross tangible form.
2. Second is the vital, which is the next stage after the manifestation of matter. It is the vital principle, the structure or force, which is indestructible and is only disconnected from one set of atoms when it becomes attracted to other sets of atoms as in attraction and repulsion, the magnetic force of energy. The vital consciousness is a principle defining the configuration of the sub-conscious mind where many sub-conscious desires and thoughts are hidden.
3. The third is the subtle energies, which are composed of highly etherized matter. These are the duplicate of the matter in its passive state, when active it depends on the vibration of its subtle energies and the oscillation within the energy pattern to give it shape and form. The shape can alter or change according to its collective energy consciousness.
4. The fourth stage is the intelligence of consciousness, which is the higher concept of nature due to its awareness of itself which brings action, memory and instinct. It is in this state of awareness of its own consciousness.
5. The fifth stage of consciousness is the awareness of nature and its dependence on the unity of oneness.
6. The sixth stage of consciousness is the uniting of duality from the lower consciousness to the higher consciousness. These two energies are separate and keep the outer consciousness from knowing about the inner or higher consciousness.
7. The seventh stage of consciousness is the light. It is the emanation from the Universal Source that is a state rather than a being. These seven stages of consciousness are the spark of light and through this consciousness it creates so it can experience its own light in some form of matter. In other words, this is what happens in the ethereal realms, the creation of light creates so many things within the universal mind and it is through these seven stages of consciousness that eventually it will manifest itself as matter and experience its own creation.

When we have the understanding of how our conscious mind works within the Divine Mind perception, and we choose to awaken the enlightening stages, we can achieve super consciousness. Super consciousness is the blissful state in which you can perceive yourself and all of existence with a pure, intuitive and holistic awareness. The superconscious state connects you to a higher state of being and functioning. For instance, when you find yourself in a flow-state or “in the zone” you are tapping into the superconscious potential. It’s also the place where true creativity and genius are found. An infinite source of wisdom and inspiration. An endless well of limitless potential.

When the frequency rises higher and higher towards the Divine and we become the Super Consciousness, it directly relates to the conscious energy moving up and down our hara line in our spine, towards our Third Eye and the Crown Chakra. When the Third Eye activates, the illusions within and without, in ourselves and the world around us, start to fall apart, and we start to see clearly, beyond what just our two eyes can see. Our intuition and awareness sharpen, and we live more in truth with ourselves and the world around us. As an enlightened free mind, you can choose to awaken to the Divine Super Consciousness and raise the energy within yourself to higher awakened states. As you raise your frequency you also activate the informing information within your DNA.

We are able to function from a higher space, and consciously manifest more of our reality, more unconditional love, more compassion, and more of our own personal power. To activate the DNA, the key is the acceptance and acknowledgement of your current state that is painful, in that moment. If you have an aversion to your reality or deep inner truth, you will drive the pain deeper into your body, rather than activating yourself. Acceptance and acknowledgement allows new powerful cognitions about ourselves into our awareness and our lives to come through and replace the previous disempowering cognitions with newly formed perceptions of truth.
